Funeral Costs

Funeral directors can help guide you through the funeral-planning process. They are legally required to give you summary of their offered services and their costs. Ask questions so that you are clear what services you are purchasing and their costs. Costs can vary greatly between funeral homes. According to the National Funeral Directors Association, in 2016 the average cost for a funeral (not including the cost of a burial vault, required at many cemeteries) was $7,360. The average cost with a burial vault, used to prevent soil settlement at the cemetery and protect the casket was $8,508. If choosing cremation the cost may be lower.

Grave Markers

Grave markers or headstones can be purchased through a cemetery or a private organization. They range in cost widely from a few hundred dollars to many thousands of dollars. Check with your chosen cemetery about any regulations before purchasing a headstone or marker.

Embalming

Embalming is a process which temporarily preserves and seals a body. It is usually used before an open-casket funeral or wake. It involves injecting chemicals into the body's vessels as well as the application of a chemical treatment on the surface of the body, followed by application of makeup and clothing. According to the National Funeral Directors Association, in 2015 the average cost of embalming was around $700. Embalming is not required by law, except in cases of communicable disease. Alternatives to traditional embalming with formaldehyde, a toxic chemical, include refrigeration, cooling with dry ice, or use of less toxic embalming chemicals. If cooling is desired, it often needs to be initiated within 24 hours of death. Talk with your funeral director if you would like to explore these options.

Cremation

What is cremation?

Cremation is an option for families that wish to bury, scatter, store at a cemetery, or personally keep the ashes of a loved one. Cremation involves exposing the body to very intense heat inside of a cremator, a kiln-like industrial furnace, reducing the body to ashes, and drying out the bone fragments. The remaining bone fragments are ground to be uniform with the rest of the ashes, and the cremated remains are placed in an urn or other vessel. Cremation is becoming an increasingly popular option. According to the National Funeral Directors Association, in 2018, 53.5% of U.S. deceased were cremated.

What is required?

A casket is not required for cremation. If a family does not desire a casket, the body will be cremated in a container of wood or cardboard, as indicated by the crematory. The crematory will typically provide this alternative container and its cost will be included in their fee. The deceased may be clothed as desired. If desired, a family can hold a viewing or wake before the cremation.

What can be done with the remains?

In Wisconsin, cremated remains may be buried in a cemetery or urn garden, stored in a columbarium or mausoleum at a cemetery, kept by a family, or scattered on private land. Laws vary from state-to-state about where remains may be scattered or kept. Cremated remains may also be scattered in the ocean, at least three nautical miles from the shore. The EPA requires a notification of burial at sea within thirty days of the burial.

Revised 12/2018

For more information on burial at sea, consult <http://www.epa.gov/region6/water/ecopro/burialremainsatsea.html>

What is the cost?

Cremation costs about ⅓ of the cost of a traditional burial. As of 2014, cremation costs range from about $2000-$5000, including a basic memorial service. If a memorial service is not desired, families may be able to work with the crematory or funeral home for a significantly lower cost. This is referred to as a “direct cremation”.

Green Burials

Green burials honor the idea of returning the body to the earth in its natural state, as well as being conscious of the health of the land itself. In a green burial, a person is buried in a biodegradable, untreated wood or cardboard casket, containing no metal or plastic parts, or they are wrapped in a natural-fiber shroud or blanket. The deceased are not embalmed, and wear clothing constructed from natural fibers. There are not yet any designated green burial cemeteries in Sauk County, though families may be able to use some of these burial practices at a traditional cemetery. For more information on green burials, visit <http://www.greenburialcouncil.org/>.

Veterans

If you or your loved one is and/or was a veteran you may be eligible for a variety of survivors' benefits. Contact the Veterans Administration for more information.

According to the Veterans Administration, your loved one is also eligible for many Veterans' Burial Benefits. "Burial benefits available include a gravesite in any of our 131 national cemeteries with available space, opening and closing of the grave, perpetual care, a Government headstone or marker, a burial flag, and a Presidential Memorial Certificate, at no cost to the family. Some Veterans may also be eligible for Burial Allowances."

If you are a veteran, your deceased spouse or dependents may be buried in the same plot at a national cemetery at no cost to the family. Funeral home and cremation costs, however, are not paid for by the VA.

Veterans buried in a private cemetery are eligible for a Government headstone, marker or medallion, a burial flag, and a Presidential Memorial Certificate at no cost to the family. There are no VA benefits available to spouses and dependents buried in a private cemetery.

Grief and Bereavement

Grief is a process, not an event, of experiencing physiologic, psychologic, behavioral, social, and spiritual reactions to the loss of a child (Hockenberry & Wilson, 2013). Grief is individualized, including a broad range emotions that differ from person to person. Grief is a normal process in response to loss; it is neither orderly nor predictable. Accepting these emotions is a part of the grieving process and is necessary for healing to occur. Everyone proceed through the healing process at a different pace. You and your loved ones may deal with grief differently.

The “five stages of grief” introduced by psychiatrist Elisabeth Kubler-Ross are feelings based on a study conducted on patients facing fatal illness. The five stages of grief are:

- Denial
- Anger
- Bargaining
- Depression
- Acceptance

These stages are not orderly and some individuals may backtrack. It is important to recognize that grieving does not happen overnight, weeks, or months but a process that can take up to a year. Difficult periods should become less intense and shorter as time goes by, but it takes time to work through a loss. Even years after the loss of a loved-one it can be especially difficult during events such as family parties or anniversaries.

Intense intrusive thoughts, episodes of severe emotion, distressing longing, feelings of excessive loneliness and emptiness, unusual sleep disturbance, and lack of motivation to complete activities of daily living such as bathing, eating, and proper hygiene may be signs and symptoms of complicated grief. Complicated grief should be addressed by a medical professional. If you or your family member noticed signs and symptoms of complicated grief contact your primary care provider for further assessment.

Untreated, complicated grief and depression can lead to significant emotional damage, life-threatening health problems, and even suicide. But treatment can help you get better.

Contact a grief counselor or professional therapist if you:

- Feel like life isn't worth living
- Wish you had died with your loved one
- Blame yourself for the loss or for failing to prevent it
- Feel numb and disconnected from others for more than a few weeks
- Are having difficulty trusting others since your loss

- Are unable to perform your normal daily activities
