- What data do we currently collect?
- What data should we be collecting?
- Why do we want to collect it?

The topic of data is again presented as being two fold. Data should be discussed in terms of ensuring best practice in new program and policy development to include data collection measures at the onset. Secondly, discussing agency specifics involving current data collection, specifically, what is being collected, what should be collected, and why. With a follow up of how do we bridge the gap between what is and what should be collected and how do we ensure agency collaboration in accessing and utilizing data for decisions about resource allocation.
